Character of the French.

The following extract from a late British publication will not be unacceptable to the sound and judicious reader. It will be found to contain many useful lessons of Politics, Wisdom and Philoso. phy.

AS to the morals, which in the absence of all positive institutions supply their place by an influence perhaps more powerful, the people of France and the government of France, are totally without any system. They are the first nation in the world that has rendered variable what nature intended should be eternal-which has converted virtue into sophistry, and brought under disputation, & logical scep ticism, the first elements of truth and most sure securities of social peace. Morals with them is a taste, a fashion, a mode varying according to the excumstances of the day. Their obligation is gone ! not ac. knowledged in practice. At the very best the firs: principles are regarded merely as simple truths, as totally unimportant and without value in action. Even honor, the best gift of the feudal system, in many points a sufficient, in almost all a useful subsecrete for natural morality and honor, have all perished in France. The system of Jaccobinism has been followed by that of military despotism. The principles of action having taken the same course.-France as a nation, and every Frenchman individually has the morals of a soldier, a slave, a sophist; one that believes nothing with sufficient faith to induce him to adopt it as a principle of action; one who syste. matically trusts his reason, and sureilely obeys his fears, his passions, his immedia einterest. Who would trust such an individual?-Who could confide in such a nation?

" As to the manners of the present race of Frenchmen, the picture is still more ab horsent. The manners of a namen are its minor morals; or rather, perhaps, its mo. -rals in action through the daily intercourse of life and domestic society. The manners in France therefore at the present day are su ch as are suited to its morals. The sha dow is as deformed as the substance from which it is projected. Their private virtue is at least as bad as their public virtue. They are as bad husbands, fathers, friends, neighbors, masters, and dependants as they are citizens. Break their general character into all possible fragments, and every component atom will be found of the same precise quality as the general mass. Nor is this state of things temporary. There is an action and re-action which tends to continue it. The state corrupts the individual; the individual supplies the stock of corruption to the state. Each mutually feeds and is fed. The minor channels, corrupting as they flow, return to swell the grand national reservoir, which overflow in its turn with an augmented force of venome and assimilates to itself whatever it

"Such, therefore, is the civil despotism of the French government. The five means of control, and securities of a moderate exercise of the sovereign power-constitution -an aristocracy of privileged classes and acknowledged corporations-long usagemorals-and manners, have no existence. One supreme will governs every thing .-Treaties are without sanction, and the pub. lic faith the private virtue of one who has effected every thing by his contempt of

"Regarded in its second point of view as a military despotism, the French form of government is still more worthy of attention. Bonaparte is the Genghis Khan. of Europe --- He knows no law but the sword, no legislative assembly but the camp. The sword is his sceptre, the camp is his cabinet. Uniting the military simplicity of the Tartar conquerors with the military science of Europe, he rests not a moment from his martial habits; he is ever in a state to take the field in the very instant of his necessity. In peace as in war he is in a state of encampment, and the wole resources of his nation are ready at his call, as the sword which is suspended in its sheath at his side. He is in every sense of the word a conqueror and a military monarch. His system of rule is that of the feudal system purged of its ancient weakness. He is an emperor-an emperor in the strictest sense of the word as employed in the lower Roman empirean emperor at the head of confederated officers, all connected with their chief, and each other, by a common interest-an emperor elected by his fortune and his guards governing his people with military des-potism, and retaining his army by military discipline. His prefects and officers are ant provinces under their patron and politi- and favor. His sons and grandsons of cal father, the great Augustus. This system of empire, as it is founded so must it be retained, by conquest-Like the principle of motion, it ceases to exist when it their duty, they were corrected according ceases to proceed: It has moreover a still more fatal characteristic. The adage ancient as the world Mo' e curat sua, does not apply to it. It easily admits of accession. If another kingdom is added it requires but another prefect. The history of mankind is as uniform as the materials, are founded on the public interest; and i of human action. This empire will be may be sufficient to applaud the wisdom of sconer or later overturoed by the jealousies a menarch, for the liberality by which he of the confederate princes. But from its present and immediate energy, it will in time overthrow every thing around it .-Kingdom after kingdom will fall into its mass, till, like the death of the poet, hav. ing destroyed every thing about, it will terminate by preying on itself. A new system will then succeed. The present monarchs of Europe are the fragments of the feudal system. When the military system under which Europe must now suffer for some centuries, shall in its turn become split and shattered. Our posterity will behold new forms of empire & modes of rule, which prophecy itself seeing thro' the foggy mis:s of time, could scarcely believe, tho" it were the finger of Divinity that pointed to them.

" As to the personal character of Bona. parte, imagination, accustomed to the ordinary course of nature, averts from it with incredulity. Every age has its standard of vice and virtue. The atrocity of the age of Tiberius was not to be expected in the 19th century. Human reason as it was supposed had made some progress in the space of so many centuries; had kept peace at least with the procession of the equinox; had advanced with the materity of nature. If this even admitted a doubt; the immediate gift of heaven itself; the spirit of christianity had passed over the surface of the moral world, and sofie ed the venom of original malignity and pri meyal evil. It was not therefore to be expected, that the course of time returning as it were by a backward current, should reproduce in the 19th century, the Seculum Phyrbæ; nova monstra questas. This prodigy of another age, however h appeared amongst us."

FROM THE PEOPLE'S FRIEND.

Doctor Johnson says, that " whether we provide for action or conversationwhether we wish to be useful or pleasing, the first requisite is the religious and mo. ral knowledge of right and wrong; the next is an acquaintance with the history el mankind, and with those examples which may be said to embody truth, and prove by events the reasonableness of opinions. The public Journalist, therefore, cannot be wrong who occasionally makes temporary topics of local polity give way to make room for well chosen extracts from the best histories of mankind. The following cha. racter of Timour, commonly called Tamerlane, taken from G bbon, is no less in teresting than instructive, and while it pleases the imagination, conveys an autul admiration of the instability of earthly grandeur, and of the inconstancy of human power and happiness.

"The fame of Timour has pervaded the East and West; his posterity is still invest. ed with the imperial title; and the admiration of his subjects, who revered him almost as a deity, may be justified in some degree by the praise or confession of his bitterest enemies. Al hough he was lame of an hand and foot, his form and stature were not noworthy of his rank; and his vigorous health, so essential to himself and to the world, was corroborated by temper. ance and exercise. In his lamiliar discourse he was grave and modest, and if he administration, they evaporated with his was ignorant of the Arabic language, be spoke with fluency and elegance the Persian the ambition of his children and grand. and Turkish idioms. It was his delight to converse with the learned on topics of his tory and science; and the amusement of his leisure hours was the game of chess, which he improved or corrupted with new refinements. In his religion he was a zealous, though not perhaps an orthodox, Mussul. man; but his sound understanding may tempt us to believe, that a superstitious re verence for omens & prophesies, for saints and astrologers, was only affected as ac in. tinet, if an hero, his descendant in the strument of policy. In the government of fifth degree, had not fled before the a vast empire, he stood alone and absolute, without a rebel- to oppose his power, a favorite to seduce his affections, or a minister to mislead his judgment. It was his firmest maxim, that whatever might be the to the gulf of Bengal. Since the reign consequence, the word of the prince should of Aurungzebe, their empire has been never be disputed or recalled; but his foes dissolved; their treasures of Delhi have have maliciously observed, that the com- been rifled by a Persian robber; and the

but so many Ceasars who govern the dist. strictly executed than those of beneficence whom Timour left six and thirty at his decease, were his first and most submissive subjects; and whenever they deviated from to the laws of Zingis, with the bastonade, and afterwards restored to honor and command. Perhaps his heart was not devoid of the social virtues; perhaps he was not incapable of loving his friends and pardon. ing his enemies; but the rules of morality is not impoverished, and for the justice by which he is strengthened and enriched. To maintain the harmony of authority and o. bedience, to chastise the proud, to protect the weak, to reward the deserving, to ba. nish vice and idleness from his dominions, to secure the traveller and merchant, to restrain the depradations of the soldier, to cherish the labors of the husbandman, to encourage industry and learning, and, by an equal and moderate assessment, to encrease the revenue, without encreasing the taxes, are indeed the duties of a prince; but, in the discharge of these duties, he finds an ample and immediate recompence. Timour might boast, that, at his accession to the throne, Asia was the prey of anarehy and rapine, whilst under his prosper. ous monarchy a child, fearless and unhurt, might carry a purse of gold from the east to the west. Such was his confidence of merit, that from this reformation he de. rived excuse for his victories, and a title to universal dominion. The four follow. ing observations will serve to appreciate his claim to the public gratitude; and perhaps we shall conclude, that the Mogulem. peror was rather the scourge than the bene. factor of mankind. 1. If some partial disorders, some local impressions, were healed by the sword of Timour, the reme. dy was far more perficious than the discase. By their rapine, cruelty and discord, the petty tyrants of Persia might afflict their subjects; but whole nations were crushed under the footsteps of the reform. er. The ground which had been occupied by flourishing cities, was often marked by his abominable trophies, by columns, or pyramids of human heads. Astracan, Carizme, Delhi, Ispahan, Bagdad, Alep po, Damascus, Boursa, Smyrna, and a housand others, were sacked, or burnt, or utterly destroyed, in his presence, and by his troops; and perhaps his conscience would have been startled, if a priest or philosopher had dated to number the millions of victims whom he had secrificed to the establishment of peace and order. 2. His most destructive wars were rather inroads than conquests. He invaded Turkestan, Kipzac, Russia, Hindosron, Syria, Anatolia, Armenia and Georgia, without a hope or desire of preserving those distant provinces. From thence he departed, la. den wi h spoil; but he left behind him nei. ther troops to awe the contumacious, nor magistrates to protect the chedient natives. When he had broken the fabric of their ancient government, he abandoned them to he evils which his invesion had aggravated or caused; nor were these evils compensat. ed by any present or possible benefit. 3. The kingdoms of Transoxiana and Persia were the proper field which he labored to cultivate and adorn, as the perpetual inheritance of his family. But his peaceful la. bors were often interrupted, and sometimes blasted, by the absence of the con- of death, the uncertainty of that hour, " queror. While he triumphed on the Volga or the Ganges, his servants, and even his last judgment, the number of the elect, hell sons, forgot their master and their duty. and, above all, eternity eternity the The public and private injuries were poor. | are the subjects upon which I am come ly redressed by the tardy rigor of enquiry | discourse, and which doubtless I ought and punishment; and we must be content have reserved for you alone. Ah! Whi to praise the institutions of Timour, as need have t of your commendation, walch the specious idea of a public monarchy. 4. Whatever might be the blessings of his life. To reign, rather than to govern, was children; the enemies of each other and iniquities, and shedding tears of sorrow & the people. A fragment of the empire was upheld with some glory by Sharokn, his youngest son; but after his decease, prove that I am sufficiently eloquent." the scene was again involved in darkness. and blood; and before the end of a century, Transoxiana and Persia were tramp. led by the Uzbeks from the porth, and the Turkmans of the black and white sheep. The race of Timour would have been ex-Uzbek arms to the conquest of Hindostan. His successors (the great Moguls) extended their sway from the mountains of Cash.

Mr. Burke, in a speech in the house of commons, in Dec. 1785, spoke as fol-

"The first potentate sold by the compa by for money was the great Mogul-the descendant of Tamerlane. This high personage, as high as human veneration can look at, is, by every account, amiable in his manners, respectable for his piety acc cording to his mode, and accomplished in all the oriental literature. All this, and the title derived under his charter, to all that we hold in India, could not save him from the general sale. Money is coined in his name; in his name justice is admi. nistered; he is prayed for in every temple through the countries we possess - But he is sold."

COMMUNICATION.

The following specimen of Eloquence is extracted from a work, entitled. " Pris. ciples of Eloquence," by the Abbe Mau.

" I remember to have heard Bridge deliver the introduction of the first discourse which he preached in the charch of St. Solpiece, Paris, 1751. The first company in the capital went out of curiosity to hear hi - ... He perceived among the congregation many bishops and other persons of the first rank; far from being intimidate ed, he delivered the following exordium.

" At the sight of an auditory so new to me, me thinks my brethren, I ought only to open my mouth to solicit your layor in behalf of a poor missionary, destitute of all those talents which you require of those who speak to you about your salvation .. Nevertheless I experience to day a feeling very different. And if I am cast dawn, suspect me not of being depressed by the wretched uneasiness occasioned by vaniy, as if I were accostonied to preach my "God forbid that a minister of heaven should ever suppose he needed an excuss with you; for whoever you may be, ye are for you sinners like myself.

" It is before your God and mine, that I feel myself impelled at this moment to strike my breast.

" Untill now I have proclaimed the righteousness of the Most High in Churches covered with thatch. I have preached the rigors of penance to the unfortunate, who wanted bread. I have declared to the good inhabitants of the country, the mostawful truths of my religion. Unhappy man what have I done? I have made sad the poor, the best friends of my God! have conveyed terror and grief into those simple and honest sculs, whom I ought to have pitied and consoled! It is here only where I behold the great, the rich, the oppressors of suffering humanity, or sinners daring and hardened. Ah! it is here only where the sacred word should be made to resound with all the force of its thunder --- and where I should place with me in this pulpit, on the one side death, threatening you, and on the other my great God who is about to judge you. I hold to day your sentence in my hand. Tremble then in my presence ye proud, disdainful men who hear me -The necessity of salvation, the certainly terrifying to you, final impenitance, that perhaps might condemn me, without say ing you? God is about to rouse you, while his unworthy minister speaks to you, for have had long experience of his mercies. Penetrated with a detestation of your past repentance, you will then throw yourselves into my arms, and by this remorse you will

The Abbé adds " Many persons still remember his sermon on Eternity, and the terror be diffused through the congregion tion"; the following is an extract from that THILADELPHIA May 18 A geodemen passenger in the ship Lou islans, now in the river, came up to to wh last evening, and informs us, that the V leit Marseilles the 2d April. He has on board, if he recollects rightly, the 64th or 69th Bulletin, containing advices of a fresh engagement between the Russians and French, in which the latter claims the victory. This action is said to have taken place in the neighborhood of Kunigsburg, which place was invested. As we already have accounts from Paris of the 30th of March, and fom Borderes of the 4h of April, both alleates to this event, we ap prehend there must be some mistake in this report. The gentleman also informs, that accounts were received at Marseilles of an advantage obtained over the Russians by the Turks So we go!

From Bilboa, March 24- (received at Marblehead.) " Our chief purpose is to inform you, that some time ago, in consequence of an order the quarantine was reduced to a few days; but unfortunately, soon after, an American vessel arrived at Alicant from Barnstable, on board of which were found two sailors, with the consequence, a severe order was issued from the king himself, that all vessels coming from the United States should perform a strict quatainine of forty days. At first it was reported and believed generally, that the cargoes could not be landed or the captains permitted to visit the lazaretto; but upon further information, we were assured, that the cargoes might be discharged, and the masters be privileged

NASSAU-HALL, 14th May, 1807. The trustees of this Institution met here on the 7th instant, and the next day the summer session of the College was opened. Mamy of the students who had joined in the late lasurrection, appeared before the Board, and expressed their regret for the part they had acted, and made such promises of luture obehence, as induced the trustees to restore them to their former standing, in their respective classes. In the evening, the Hon. Elias Bouanot, on behalf of the Board, delivered an Address to the whole body of the students assembled in the public Hall, which was heard

With great attention and respect. " The exercises of the College have commenced with the greatest appearances of good order, and submission to the laws. Some of der a full conviction of their late error. Even of those, who through some scruples of false honor, have not re-entered the College, the greater part have very candidly condemned the principles of the combination, and have expressed their regret for their participation in it. It is remarkable, that of all those who look part in this combination, not more than three or four pretend that they had the smallest personal grievance to complain of, in the

me a reprobate cries out, "What o'clock the prospects of the Institution, both for morals and improvement are evidently more favorable than they were for some time before the disorder took place. Every student appears to come with his mind impressed with the necessity of suboramation and obedience to the raws. The conege recommences its operation with upwards of one hundred students, and others are daily entering,"

> We had an opportunity of conversing a few days past, with a respectable and worthy old revolutionary soldier, who among other things, related to us the two following circumstances, which, though well known in the neighborhood where they occurred, we do not recollect them with distinction to pesterny. ever to have seen published, and as they ought not to be forgotten, we with pleasure relate them in the old gentleman's own words:

"On the 15th day of Mrrch, 1781, sixteen brave Americans were made prisoners by a party of British troops, in Spartanburg district, in South Carolina; four of the number, viz. captain Matthew Pattern of that district, captain James Elder, Landy Farrar & Charles Bruce, were tried as rebels, and without much ceremony were sentenced to be executed the next day at ten o'clock. When they were brought to the gallows, and after the ropes were tied round their necks, captain Pattern, in a cool, deliberate and undaunted manner addressed the officer and attendants in these words: "Gentlemen, I am in your power, and you may easily take my life, but I have a satisfaction you cannot deprive me of, I have yet friends left who I well know will have twenty lives for mine." This short address was delivered in that cool and confident manner which made it impressive and the condemned prisoners were immediately pardoned, and our informant, who was one of the number, adds, that captain Pattern is now living with his 3d wife, and he hopes he may long live to raise a numerous offspring, as brave and as worthy as imself."

[ Augusta Herald.

The re was a public magazine kept at the house of colonel Thomas, in Spartanourg distheict, Sou, th Carolina, in the year 1779, and it being discovered that a party of tories had dete mined on a certain day to attack, and if possit le, make themselves masters of the place, a pumber of men had collected together from the reighborhood for its defence. But it so happen 'ed, that as soon as the tories made their appearance in a body, on a hill near the magazine, all the men to whom its defence had been confide d, fled, except Josiah Culbertson, a private soldier, who, animated by would neither fly nor yield, while he had strength to fight. Hether efore called his wife and her mother, and two or three other women to his assistance, and having several muskets in the house, the wome 'u were directed to load the guns and hand them to Culbertson, as fast as he fired them off. As soon as the tories advanced within moderate gun shot, Culbertson began to fire upon them, uncl. is he had taken his station in an upper room, he fired from different windows with as much rapidity as his own exertions and the activity of the women in loading and handing him the muskets would enable him to do. The tories tho they returned his fire from their whole body, yet they did not know by what number they were opposed, but they saw and several of highest symptoms of the yellow fever. In them severely felt, that they had to contend with a bravery which they had no wish to encounter in close quarters, and after an engagement of 15 or 20 minutes, the assailants precipitately retreated, and could never more be prevailed upon to renew the attack, and the brave Mr. Culbertson had the satisfaction to find, that he had actually beat off one hundred and forty-five tories and preserved the magazine. This worthy veteran, we are told, particularly distinguished himself in the battle of King's Mountain, and in the famous defeat of Colonel Tarleton, and he now lives an industrious farmer and good federalist, in the upper parts of South Carolina, respected by his neighbors, and we trust, will long be honored by his country,

The emperor of Russia has given a tresh instance of an enlightened mind, in an ukase which has recently been issued at St. forernment of the college. Upon the whole, Petersburg, is favor of commerce. In or der to give more consideration and distinction to commercial pursuits, the ukase recommends the establishment of commercial companies. It allows the nobility to become members of the first and second classes of merchants, it being the anxious wish of the emperor to draw closer the ties between these two descriptions of his subjects. Wholesale merchants may even a. space to the first offices of the state, and are to have the privilege of appearing at court. Entract of a letter from Barbadoes, dated April 11.

"Besides the news which the papers contain, we have nothing, except the report of a French squadron being momently expecied at Marcivique with a reinforcement of troops for that island and Guadaloupe-We have one ninety-eight and 4 seventy. four's, besides fr gates, so that we have no thing to feer."

The schr Jones Eddy, captain William Herald, 28 days from Trinidad for Poris mouth, with rum and molasses, b longing to Messrs. Ely and Walton of that lown, went ashore on Plumb island, about half a mile to the southward of the point, at 2 a'clock on Phursday se'nnight. The capt attempted to enter he harbor, but struck on the south breaker, drifted over, and drove ashore on the beach. Mr. Richard, son, who keeps the house established on that island, immediately repaired to the beach, and be his exercious capt. Heraid with two or three of his people, were saved from a watery grave. The boar in which captain Heraid and his men left the schr upser, and captain Herald received const derable injury; on reaching the hotel on he island every exemion was made by cap ain R chardson and his family to lender him comfortable. A number of gen tiemen from Newburyport seeing the distress of the vessel, hastened to the beach with carriages, clothes, &c. and aff rded every possible assistance to the shipwiecked strangers. The rescue of these seamen add another list to the people saved thro the benevalence of gentlemen in establish. ing a turopike to that island, and placing the true American spirit, resolved, that he bese whose integrity and exertions may be relied on, to watch over the destiny of the adventuring mariners. The cargo of the schooner is wholly saved, which would have been impossible had the turnpike not here established. The vessel may again be launched without much damage.

THE LOUVRE - The emperor Napo leon has declared his intention to conse. crate the Louvre entirely to the service of literature. The French say, that in a tow. er of this edifice, Charles V established the first public library in France, if not in all Europe. That upon the death of Charles it contained about 900 volumes, which Henry VI of England violated. That Henry VI appropriated it for valuable col lections in the arts. But, say the French, other times other cases. It is now to be the place of the imperial library, which al ready contains 300,000 printed volumes, 70,000 manuscripts, 20,000 engravings, 49,000 bronz medals, and 30,000 medals in gold. Napoleon has assigned this libra. ry for the Louvre, which first received its gift from Charles V, the wise and eloquent five hundred years from the present time. Filled with the great designs which emply ed Henry IV, he wishes to collect, as he did, under his own eyes, and within the inclosures of his own palace, all the monu. ments of the sciences and of the arts, ob tained by his arms, perfected and arranged under his government. The Museum of Painting will still occupy the great gallery and a new structure will be added to the palace for the Statues. The other collections will be accommodated, so that these immense treasures of Louvre, sucured by guards, might never be endaggered in the night by being in the palaces inhabited by the men.

FROM THE BALANCE. NEW GEOGRAPHY.

Mr. HORATIO G. STAFFORD, of this city, is preparing for the ress, a very useful school book, entitled " Universal Geography, and trasted state. The coast has been clear of Rudiments of Useful Knowledge: (in a pocket volume) Containing a short, but comprehensive system of Geography, in its several vorable to commerce than the petty tyrant parts; together with a brief survey of the principles of Natural Philosophy."-The work is divided into tweive sections, arranged under the following heads :--

Section 1. Of the solar system. 2. Of the earth in particular: its figure, magnitude and motions - With a great variety of illustrations and explanations of the different phenomena of nature.

3. Of maps and globes, and their use. In these three are comprised the scientific or astronomical part of geography properly digested, and comprehensively and familiarly explained.

4. A short comprehensive view of natural philosophy; the properties of matter; the laws of motion; The phenomena of winds, tides, rainbows, clouds, storms, harricales, and aurora borealis, or northern lights, familiarly explained.

3. General Geography, or a view of the political divisions of the earth as divided into empires, kingdoms and states. This is the largest division of the work, and exhibits a general view of the historical part of geogra-

6. Contains a brief review of the different languages, systems of religion, and governments of nations.

7. Of the cronology and the divisions of time, with some necessary mathematical explanations

8. An improved extensive geographical table, containing the names and situations, with the latitude and longitude, of the chief cities, towns, seas, guiplis, bays, straits, capes and other remarkable places in the known

S. A short arithmetical account of decimal arithmetic and Federal Money.

110. The money of account of different nations and commercial countries; with the value in sterling of Great Britain, and in Tederad money.

II. A list of all the past-offices in the U. States, with the states and counties in which they are situated; their distances from Washington City—and the rates of postage.

12. An improved chronological table of remarkable events, from the creation, down to the present time.

The work will be well printed in a dworledme volume of from 300 to 500 pages, will be illustrated with seven or eighbweil executed maps, and will be delivered to subscribers. bound and lettered, at the moderate price of

As the plan of the work is new, and as the execution, as far as it has been examined, has met with the decided approbation of good judges, we venture to recommend it to the patronage of the public.
